

I contacted the office for Hawaii Attorney General Lopez with a "request for intervention and action in response to official misconduct and violation of my civil rights by members of the Honolulu Police Department Criminal Investigation Division". I was very specific and detailed with my explanations of how I was victimized by repeated crimes committed against me and no one in law enforcement will intervene.

The Attorney General's response reads "The Department of the Attorney General cannot give you legal nor technical advice". "As to your cybersecurity concerns, again, the Department of the Attorney General (which has a cyber crime division) cannot give you advice on those matters". I was referred to the back to the FBI, back to HPD, or to get an attorney.

I replied for the record advising I did not ask for legal or technical advice but instead as a citizen of Hawaii I asked for intervention and protection because of a lack of law enforcement action. I've been ghosted since then.
